White clouds of carnations and white Chrysanthemums are nestled within a silver chalice of pistachio. Pop this on the console table in the hallway or sideboard in the living/dining room. This lovely Christmas bouquet is filled with a mix of red, green and soft pink, perfect for bringing some warmth to your home in the cold winter months. The adobe's reception area (a former bedroom) showcases the project's emphasis on organic materials and craftsmanship. "We went a little wild with cowhide in this room," says Fulk, referring to the brindle rug and antique metal-and-hide wingback chairs, but their impact is tempered by the sculptural vintage Italian light fixture and table, as well as the handpainted walls done by Rafael Arana, an artist on Fulk's staff. Whether it's the tinsel trees, the heartfelt gifts, or just the general kind-hearted and simple spirit of the times, no era captured the true essence of Christmas quite like the 1940s and 1950s. Even today, our traditional associations of the holiday are from that time period, and the most beloved holiday films are either from it ( It's A Wonderful Life ) or about it ( A. Tinsel everywhere! Drape it over the tree, the mantel, or around the doorways and windows. It will give your house some Christmas sparkle. This Brite Star tinsel is highly rated and comes with 2,000 strands. Discover the things hanging out in your attic worth loads of money. Vintage Sleds Samuel L. Allen patented his Flexible Flyer in Cinnaminson, New Jersey, in 1889. "Flexible" applies to both the sled's steering capabilities, which offered greater control than traditional gooseneck sleds or toboggans, and the fact that riders could use the sleds either seated or lying down. Sales were slow until Allen began marketing the sleds to department store toy buyers. The Flexible Flyer pictured here dates from the 1930s. Check out the 10 best winter toys to pick up to enjoy the outdoors. BETTY BELL: Fine antiques, such as Dresdens and cottons. 2. In the past, people traditionally thanked their loyal letter carriers by giving them a small Christmas gift. Though we often don't have the chance to develop relationships with our letter carriers today, you can still give them a token of appreciation around the holidays. Just remember that federal guidelines stipulate that postal employees can't receive gifts worth more than $20. Ceramic Christmas Trees While originally produced in the 1940s, most ceramic trees sold today date from the 1970s and 1980s. Their popularity has recently surged, increasing their value. Dating vintage ceramic trees can be tricky, as they were often handmade, and the mold date may not be the same as the date the tree was made. If you don't want to spend money on vintage Christmas decorations here are some cheap DIY Christmas decorations you can easily make yourself or consult the cheapskate's guide to decorating. Bottlebrush trees are popular again today and can be found at most stores that carry Christmas decor, but they were first popular in the '40s and '50s. This vintage set of six was made in Taiwan and they are much simpler than the sparkly ones you'll find today. They have gold wooden bases and the turquoise blue/green color of the trees will really pop against your other Christmas decor. While it's certainly convenient to pick up a freshly cut Christmas tree from your grocery store's parking lot, that tradition doesn't have quite the same sense of holiday magic as venturing into a snow-covered wood to choose the perfect evergreen to display in your home. Depending on where you live, there are likely Christmas tree farms in your area that allow you to choose and cut down your own Christmas tree. 5. Diorama: Made in Europe and Japan, this 1950s style displays festive holiday scenes. Italian varieties such as this deer and elf vignette command the highest price. Value: $25. Royal Ruby Glassware This was the first glassware produced by the newly formed Anchor Hocking Glass Co. in 1939. Like the company's Forest Green line, this glassware remains popular for holiday table settings. Be on the lookout at estate and garage sales for deals, as rare pieces can command more than $50. Putz Houses Based on a German tradition, these little cardboard houses were often made in Japan and sold in U.S. dime stores from the 1920s through the 1960s. New manufacturers have been inspired by their current popularity, and instructions for creating your own abound online. Value depends on size, condition, and complexity. 38 Rustic Christmas Tree Ideas to Try This Season. Free-blown Italian Glass Ornaments The Soffieria De Carlini company has made free-blown glass ornaments since 1947, when a well-known sculptor decided to use his talent to "sculpt" glass figurines, which were then individually hand-painted and fancifully decorated. After you search through your vintage Christmas decorations, head up to your attic to see if you have any of these items that could make you rich. Do Not Sell My Personal Information- CA Residents.
